I believe he does mean to download the whole mapleprimes site so he can view all the questions/post:

There does exist some webcatching software, I used one a few years ago however I might add as soon as someone posts a new question/post, as the software is catching the pages, then questions and posts are shifted and the program may capture duplicate questions (ie while your just saving (for example) the end of page 55 just as someone posts a new one you'll end up with the same question at the beginning of page 56, albeit a minor issue.

It would be, perhaps, nice for a repository dvd library of all of the mapleprimes questions available. Maybe not all are quite useful. As an idea it could be packaged up with the purchase of a new Maple. I'm not worried about the logistics of how it would be done, it's just an idea.

Your question is unclear. What do you mean by "MaplePrimes"? I think the whole content of the site www.mapleprimes.com is too big (Edit and complex) to be downloaded on your comp.
